Career Contributions – Highlights

1. Co-director (with Dr. Sandra Bucerius) of the University of Alberta Prison Project. This is the largest independent empirical study on the lives of incarcerated men and women in the history of Canadian criminology
2. Policing the Risk Society (co-authored with Richard Ericson) this monograph was awarded special recognition by the American Law and Society Association. It is one of the most cited academic monographs on the police published in the past 20 years. It has been cited over 2,000 times and was recently reviewed by Professor Pat O'Malley in the 'classics of policing studies' series in the journal Policing & Society.
3. The Routledge Handbook of Surveillance Studies (co-edited with Kirstie Ball and David Lyon – 2002). With contributions from 40 key figures and coming in at 250,000 words of text, this is the definitive resource in the field of Surveillance Studies.
4. The article 'The Surveillant Assemblage' (co-authored with Richard Ericson) is a theoretical contribution to the study of surveillance. It is widely reprinted, and with over 1,800 citations it is by far the most cited article in the field of Surveillance Studies. It is the most cited article published in the British Journal of Sociology over the past three years – a distinction it has held for several years.
5. My monograph, Making Crime Count, is an empirical analysis of the production of official crime statistics. It was a finalist for the Society for the Study of Social Problems Outstanding Scholarship Award.
6. My co-authored (with Dr. Aaron Doyle) book 57 Ways to Screw Up in Graduate School (University of Chicago Press) offers a series of pragmatic lessons for the next generation of scholars on how to avoid common pitfalls in graduate school.
