7. Significant Career Contributions

7.1 Significant Research and Creative Contributions

A review of my academic pursuits reveals diverse, yet interrelated activity between research and creative work. The initial foray into research as a graduate student was inspired by my work as a choral music educator with a passion for children's singing voices. My dissertation—The child voice as social construct (2004)—was a thorough examination of attitudes toward and training of the child singing voice through the lens of historical, physiological, pedagogical, and social contexts.

After my 2004 appointment at UA Augustana faculty—as a director of choral activities and teacher of choral conducting and choral literature—my research activity shifted to embrace undergraduate choral conducting pedagogy and professional learning opportunities for choral music educators. A keen interest in choral repertoire, and specifically Canadian choral repertoire, my research creation activities included commissions for numerous new Canadian choral compositions, the production of two CD recordings with the UA Augustana Choir, and annual choral performance tours with the UA Augustana Choir through:

- local recruitment and community outreach tours
- national tours to British Columbia and to Nova Scotia to perform at Choral Canada's Podium 2014 national choral conference and,
- international tours to the USA (2006), Italy (2008), and Hungary (2012)

After ten years in service as director of choral activities, due to chronic illness, my work as a choral conductor was reimaged by necessity in 2014. As I moved through an intense period of treatment and subsequent healing, my research interests shifted to embrace holistic, therapeutic, and inclusive perspectives as related to singing and choral singing. With research renewal inspired by my abiding commitment to singing advocacy and song-based music education, current research and creative work now centers on choral inclusion and multigenerational singing, the intersection of music, health, and well-being. Motivated by SARS-CoV-2, my research has moved full circle with a return to investigate the child singing voice of the 21st century as impacted by the global pandemic.

A summary of research career highlights include:

In the summer of 2022, I will present at the International Society for Music Education (ISME) 24th annual conference—A Visible Voice. Perfectly aligned with the conference theme, my paper will take the form of a tribute to Canadian choral composer, R. Murray Schafer through an analysis of a multi-media research-creation project—The SingAble Elements: Fire, Earth, Air, Water—explored by SingAble between the 2020-2022 choral seasons.

In 2021 and 2022, the UA Endowment Fund for the Future/Support for Advanced Scholarship (EFF/SAS) and Kule Institute for Advanced Study (KIAS) | UAlberta-Alberta Teachers' Association grants will fund a pilot study assessing how the attitudes that children have toward singing are affected by the SARS-CoV-2 global pandemic. These From the Voices of Children (FVC) research pilot projects will gather qualitative and quantitative data through one-on-one interviews as well as through an anonymous online survey conducted in Edmonton, Central Alberta, and Calgary area communities and schools. Awarded in June 2022, a SSHRC Insight Development Grant will expand the two FVC pilot projects for a pan-Alberta assessment. Data from these three studies will serve to inform decisions made by policy makers, school and community music educators, and the general public as strategies are set in place to rebuild music programs.

Significant Research and Creative Contributions, cont'd

In 2018, through designing and hosting a highly successful music educators' symposium for the International Kodály Society for music educators, SingAble—an award-winning multigenerational community inclusion choir—was established to bridge boundaries and to bring over 100 community choristers of all ages to inclusively enjoy the wonders and therapeutic benefit of choral singing. The SingAble multigenerational community inclusion choir is the topic for a chapter which will be published by Cambridge Scholars Publishing in 2023.

As principal editor and in collaboration with Dr. Kim Eyre (sessional instructor, Western University) and Cypress Choral Music, a culturally sensitive second edition of Reflections of Canada (Canadian a cappella folk song arrangements for equal and mixed voice) was published in the summer of 2017.

In 2014, The Augustana Choir was selected by jury through the Canada's national choral service organization—Choral Canada—to perform under my direction at the biennial national choral conference in Halifax, Nova Scotia.

7.2 Significant Pedagogical Contributions

- 2020-2021 During the COVID-19 pandemic and closely connected to the SingAble inclusion choir research, I have become increasingly involved with the Music & Wellness community, engaging in professional learning in music therapy contexts. I have designed and piloted a successful senior interdisciplinary undergraduate course—AUMUS 356 Music & Wellness—which serves to enrich curricular revisions at the Uof A Augustana Campus and, as well, has become the foundation for music education advocacy research. Music & Wellness is the topic for a chapter which will be published with Cambridge Scholars Publishing in 2023.

- 2018-2020 In consultation with colleagues and peers beyond the University of Alberta, in my role as Director of Music (2019-2021), I revised the University of Alberta Augustana Faculty Bachelor of Music curriculum. The Bachelor of Music Performance-Based Pedagogy degree offers a broader focus on pedagogical awareness, interdisciplinarity and holistic career pathways, this curricular innovation serves to provide Bachelor of Music students of the future with a focus on both performance and pedagogical training,

- 2011-2019 Together with Dr. Jody Stark (University of Manitoba, Assistant Professor of Music Education), a Kodály-inspired summer program was developed and established under the auspices of the University of Alberta Summer Music Academy. Based on three years of undergraduate or graduate summer study, this accredited professional development opportunity provides pre-service and in-service music educators with rigorous training in Kodály-inspired pedagogical practices.

- 2006-2009 In collaboration with Alberta's provincial service organization for choral music educators, Choir Alberta, I developed, established, and offered a summer choral conducting intensive based on holistic, pedagogical principles in a partnership between the University of Alberta Augustana and Education faculties with the creation of the University of Alberta Summer

Music Academy. Hosted at the UofA Augustana Campus, this professional development opportunity was designed for in-service music teachers.

1994-present As musicianship training is one of my areas of interest and pedagogical expertise, I have taught and continue to teach musicianship courses in a number of secondary and post-secondary institutions in Hungary (Zoltán Kodály Conservatory) and Canada (Sir Wilfrid Laurier University, University of Calgary, University of Alberta).

5.3 Significant Service Contributions

My passion for building community through musical endeavor combined with a natural affinity for an inclination to work in leadership capacities has led me throughout my career to dedicate myself to several provincial, national, and international service organizations to promote Kodály-based music education and for choral music education.

In March 2021, I was deeply grateful to be recognized by the national community of music educators, awarded the title of Honourary Member of the Kodály Society of Canada in recognition for service and dedication to Kodály-based music education.

Between May 2019 and July 2021, I assumed the role of Director of Music (DoM) for the UA Augustana music division. The duties of this administrative position included oversight of a university and community conservatory, curriculum and program offerings, concert series, recruitment, promotion, teaching faculty, administrative staff, facilities, student advisement and enrolment, budget, and fund development. During my time as DoM, I created a stable, unified, and cohesive unit with a positive vision for the future.

In the summer of 2017, The University of Alberta Augustana Faculty was honoured to engage in a meaningful and successful partnership with the International Kodály Society (IKS), the Kodály Society of Canada (KSC), and the Alberta Kodály Association (AKA) to host the 23rd International Kodály Symposium Singing the Circle: Kodály-Based Music Education from Birth to Adult. This international event attracted nearly 300 delegates representing 21 countries to the University of Alberta Augustana Campus to experience an unparalleled examination of Kodály-based music education through research, practices, and musical performances. The impact of the Symposium was wide-ranging, bringing community stakeholders together within international, national and local music education communities.

The outcome from this successful Singing the Circle project provided significant funds for the KSC and the AKA to adopt new programs and initiatives. Now equipped with adequate funds, the outreach capacity of both organizations has expanded exponentially which will influence generations of music educators across the country. The Symposium project has also been the catalyst for the establishment of SingAble, UofA Augustana's award-winning multigenerational inclusion choir serving individuals with exceptionalities as well as the general community at all ages and stages of life.

As president of the Alberta Choral Federation (now Choir Alberta) between 2006 and 2010, I was honoured to provide an organization plagued by significant financial and administrative challenges with vision, clarity and purposeful direction. As a result of my two-term presidency, the Alberta Choral Federation emerged a stronger and more vital provincial organization dedicated to serve choral music educators and countless choristers.

With a chosen vocation as a choral music educator, my primary goal is simple: In the words of Rainer Maria Rilke, “to sing is to be.”² For the remainder of my career, whether working with infants or children, youth, the elderly, or those with developmental disabilities, I will continue to dedicate myself to the service of the community whereby all will be led to recognize, embrace and honour the singer that resides within each and every person.
